"MEPHISTOPHELES"

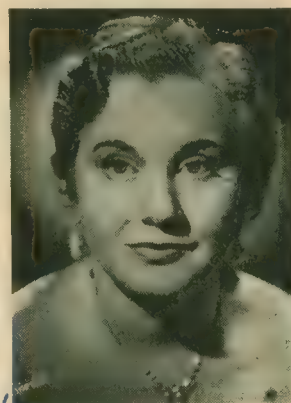

STANISLAV PIECZORA

Stanislaw Pieczora, the famous Polish bass, whose studies in Italy were interrupted by the war, made his debut as Don Giovanni in the Warsaw Grand Theatre. He practised as a doctor in London after the war, and made numerous appearances in televised opera before giving up his practice to join the Carl Rosa Opera Company. A regular broadcaster, he is well known on the Continent both as a concert singer and in opera. Principal bass with the Royal Nederlandsche Opera in Amsterdam, he has given many performances with the Sadler's Well Company, and the role "Mephistopheles" is one of his favourites.

"MARGARITA"

Edvina Gray is also paying a return visit to Limerick, where she scored a spectacular success in "Lucia di Lammermoor" last year. A brilliant soprano, she was trained in Milan, and subsequently sang leading roles in opera houses throughout Italy, including Rome, Milan, Bologna and Palma. She has previously sung the part of "Margarita" in the Reggio Emilia, in Berne and with the Carl Rosa Opera Company in England. Noted for a voice of extraordinary range and admirable quality, she broadcasts frequently over the Swiss and Italian National Radio networks, as well as the B.B.C.

EDVINA GRAY

"FAUST"

ROWLAND JONES

*all good wishes
Edvina Gray*

Rowland Jones, principal tenor with the Sadler's Wells Opera Company, has also appeared as guest principal with the Covent Garden Opera, the Dublin Grand Opera and the Welsh National Opera Companies. He was an outstanding success in the recent Sadler's Wells production of "Die Fledermaus," which he also recorded for H.M.V. He has broadcast and televised on numerous occasions, including the famous "proms" and at the National Eisteddfod of Wales. His repertoire includes all the well-known tenor roles, of which he is particularly noted for his interpretation of the name part in "Faust."

WILLIAM DICKIE

William Dickie, regarded as one of the finest interpreters of this difficult leading role, will be making a welcome re-appearance in Limerick, where he is remembered for his magnificent performances in "La Traviata" and "The Lily of Killarney" two years ago. The Covent Garden baritone, who studied with Professor Stefan Pohlmann of Vienna and under Tito Ruffo in Italy, has sung leading roles in many Italian Opera houses, in the Vienna State Opera and the Krefeld Opera. He has also made complete recordings of "Rigoletto" and "La Traviata" in La Scala, Milan, for Columbia.

Lucille Graham, making an eagerly-awaited debut in Limerick as "Gilda," is undoubtedly the most televised soprano in Britain to-day. She was chosen to sing the part of Adelina Patti when the B.B.C. televised Madame Patti's life story, and also for the difficult role of Lucia when Donizetti's opera was recreated for the first time in London for over 40 years. The resident star of many B.B.C. programmes, she has also sung in Hong Kong, Malta, Cairo, Berlin, Vienna, Hamburg, Brussels and Amsterdam. She has an extensive repertoire, and sings fluently in six languages.

LUCILLE GRAHAM

"DUKE OF MANTUA"

ROBERT THOMAS

Robert Thomas is preceded by an imposing reputation as the finest "Duke of Mantua" available at the present time. The possessor of a thrilling voice of great power, with a commanding stage presence, this distinguished tenor has appeared with the world's finest singers in most of the great European opera houses, as well as Covent Garden, Sadler's Wells and Glyndebourne. He received nation-wide acclaim for his performance in the recent B.B.C. television broadcast production of "Pagliacchi." A recording artist of note, his first appearance in Ireland is an event of major theatrical importance.

The Story of the Opera

ACT I.

A BALL is in progress in the Palace of the Duke of Mantua, who boasts to Borsa, a Courtier, of his many feminine conquests. He is especially eager, the Duke declares, to meet a certain young girl whom he has seen in church. At present, however, the Duke's attentions are directed towards the Countess Ceprano. Count Ceprano, infuriated is taunted by Rigoletto, the hunch-backed Court Jester. The Count devises a plot to kidnap the girl whom he believes to be Rigoletto's mistress, and persuades the other Courtiers to join him in the scheme. Suddenly the Ball is interrupted by Count Monterone, an old noble whose daughter has been a victim of the Duke. Forcing his way into the Duke's presence, Monterone curses both the Duke and Rigoletto for their mockery. As Monterone is led away Rigoletto broods over the curse which has been laid on him.

ACT II.

Late at night Rigoletto, on his way to the house where he has hidden his daughter, is approached by Sparafucile, a professional assassin. Rigoletto dismisses the murderer after learning where he may be found in case he should be needed. Rigoletto greets Gilda warmly. Calling Giovanna, Gilda's nurse, he warns her neither to admit anyone to the house, not to let Gilda be seen in Mantua. As Rigoletto leaves, the Duke slips into the garden, having come to meet the unknown girl whom he has seen in church. He learns that she is Rigoletto's daughter and, after the Jester has left, passionately declares his love for her, telling her that he is a penniless student. Gilda accepts his advances, admitting that she loves him, but sends him away at the sound of footsteps outside the house. The noise which is heard is made by Ceprano and the Courtiers. They have come to abduct Gilda. In the street they encounter Rigoletto himself and persuade him that it is the Countess Ceprano they are about to kidnap. He joins the plot and, blindfolded in the darkness, holds the ladder while the Courtiers steal away his own daughter. Learning how he has been tricked, Rigoletto cries out that the curse of Monterone has fallen.

ACT III.

The Duke muses on his love for Gilda and expresses his desire to find her at once. The Courtiers burst in to tell him how cleverly they schemed to kidnap the mistress of the Jester the night before. Guessing that the victim is Rigoletto's daughter and the girl he loves, the Duke learns from the Courtiers that she is hidden in a neighbouring room. He rushes away to find her.

Rigoletto enters, looking for Gilda, and pretending to be in high good spirits. Cursing the Courtiers who have snatched her away from him, he demands to see his daughter. The conspirators are shocked to learn their victim's identity. Suddenly Gilda rushes into the room. She begs her father to send away the Courtiers, then confesses her long flirtation with the "student," who she now knows as the libertine Duke. As she finishes her admission, Monterone is led through the room, on his way to prison. Stopping before the portrait of the Duke, he laments that his curse has had no effect on the betrayer of his daughter. Hearing him, Rigoletto shouts that honour shall indeed be avenged, and swears to kill the Duke.

ACT IV.

Rigoletto's plot to murder the Duke is well under way. Sparafucile, the assassin, has been hired, and his sister, a dancer named Maddalena, has lured the Duke to their lonely inn. The Jester compels Gilda to watch the Duke flirt with Maddalena. Still, Gilda insists, she loves him. Rigoletto sends her home to get a horse and men's clothes, telling her to meet him in Verona the following day. After she has gone, Rigoletto tells Sparafucile to keep the victim there until he gets back. Meanwhile, Maddalena, who has been won by the Duke's declaration of love, begs Sparafucile to spare the Duke. Kill the Jester instead, she suggests. Sparafucile refuses, but promises to kill anyone who Fate should send to the inn door before midnight. Gilda, who overhears his words, vows that she will gladly give her life to save the Duke. Begging shelter in the inn, she walks into the arms of Sparafucile, who stabs her and stuffs her body into a sack.

Rigoletto returns, pays the assassin, and is given the body, which he believes to be the Duke's. Sparafucile advises Rigoletto to throw it into the river quickly, then disappears. Gloating at his triumph over his master, Rigoletto is horrified to hear the voice of the Duke. Cutting open the sack he discovers his dying daughter. As Gilda gasps her last breath, Rigoletto falls on her body, sobbing hysterically that the curse has finally been fulfilled.
